Environment, culture and heritage
Aboriginal cultural heritage
The park is in an area known as Gariwerd and is in the traditional lands of Aboriginal people with cultural history dating back at least 22,000 years. This landscape tells their story and protects cultural sites including over 80% of all rock art found in Victoria. Five rock shelters are open to public viewing; Ngamadjidj, Gulgurn Manja, Billimina, Manja and Bunjil Shelter (Black Range Reserve near Stawell). Begin your cultural journey at Brambuk NPCC and be sure to pick up a copy of the ‘Aboriginal Culture of Gariwerd’.

Post settlement
The Grampians was named after the Grampian Mountains in Scotland by Major Thomas Mitchell on his 1836 expedition through western Victoria. Since this time the area has seen much change, particularly through industries such as forestry, stone quarrying, gold mining and water harvesting. The park has had dams and pipelines constructed to supply water to the region for drinking and agriculture. People have been drawn here for thousands of years and tourism established its roots in the early 1900s. More than 1.3 million people from all over the world visit the park annually.

Geology
The sandstone ranges of the Grampians began forming approximately 430 million years ago as sediment deposited on the sea floor. Geological processes of pressure, heat, folding, faulting and erosion continue to shape the mountain ranges appearance. This geology is fundamental to soil composition, and has had direct impact on the flora found within the national park.

Wildlife
The park provides habitat for at least 230 bird, 40 mammal, 30 reptile, 11 amphibian and 6 native fish species. 50 species in the park are classified as threatened, including Brush-tailed Rock Wallabies, Smokey Mice and Powerful Owls.

Halls Gap and Fyans Valley are one area to see Eastern-grey Kangaroos, Emus and to hear kookaburras at dawn and dusk. Flora
The park protects one third of Victoria’s flora species and is the most important botanical reserve in the state. Close to 970 native species occur and over 40 are found nowhere else in the world. The area is known for its rich and colourful spring wildflower displays. Places to visit include Heatherlie Quarry, Sundial Peak and the Piccaninny.
