Things to see and do

Walking

Whatever time of year you visit there is always something to see at Dandenong Ranges Botanic Garden.

Spring

In early spring you can walk the Golden Mile of daffodils and see many camellias and magnolias in flower. By mid-spring the Cherry Grove is in full flower. This time is also the peak season of flowering for the azaleas and rhododendrons and it is a pleasure to wander through the sprays of extravagant colour.

Summer

Summer is a great time to walk the Nature Trail in the cool rainforest atmosphere or picnic in the cool shade on the Cherry Lawn and wander through the collection of conifers. The brilliant blue and white hydrangeas can be seen in full flower.

Autumn

During autumn, colour is ablaze as the deciduous trees and shrubs turn every shade of yellow, red and orange. The views by the lake are spectacular as many of the hydrangeas take on rusty colours and are reflected in the cool calm waters.

Winter

Winter is a season of contrast. The mists create an aura of mystery among the Mountain Ash and the air is always fresh and cool. Bare tree trunks and branches reflect in the mountain lake and in late winter Hellebore and Cyclamen flowers carpet the ground. The Vireya collection can be seen flowering throughout the year.

Café and function centre

Café Vireya operates daily during spring for light lunches, morning and afternoon teas. During the remainder of the year it is open on weekends only. Visit www.cafevireya.com.au for further information.
